

After Yoseph died and the Yisraelites had greatly increased, a new Pharaoh came to power who didn't know what Yoseph had done for Mitzrayim. Because he didn't know Yoseph he was afraid of the Yisraelites' great numbers, so he made life difficult for them. When that didn't work, Pharaoh tried to kill the male Yisraelite babies, but the midwives didn't cooperate. This time, Pharaoh made it law to kill the newborn Yisraelite babies, but a Levite family hid their baby and later set him adrift in the river. Pharaoh's daughter found the baby and named him Moshe and raised him as her own son.

When Moshe was grown he killed a Mitzrite for beating a Hebrew. Moshe was afraid Pharaoh knew so he fled Mitzrayim. Moshe went to Midian and lived with Yitro. Moshe married one of Yitro's daughters and had a comfortable life, but the Yisraelites were miserable and called out to Elohim. Elohim heard the cry of the Yisraelites and sent Moshe and Aharon to lead them to freedom. To help them with this task Elohim gave them three signs they could show Pharaoh and the Yisraelites.

1. His staff would turn into a serpent.
2. Moshe would put his hand into his robe and his hand would become leprous.
3. He would take a pitcher of water from the Nile, pour it on the ground, and the water would turn to blood.

Moshe and Aharon went to Pharaoh and requested that the Yisraelites be allowed to take a three day journey into the wilderness. Pharaoh did not want to let them go and increased the Yisraelites' hardships.
