Tazria

(She Bears Seed)

YHWH told Moshe that if a woman gave birth to a boy, she would be unclean for one week as during her monthly cycle, then for another thirty-three days, and the boy needed to be circumcised when he was eight days old. If she gave birth to a girl, she would be unclean for two weeks as during her monthly cycle and then for another sixty-six days.

The parents were then to go and offer a lamb or two turtle-doves or two pigeons for a sin offering. Yeshua's parents did this after he was born.

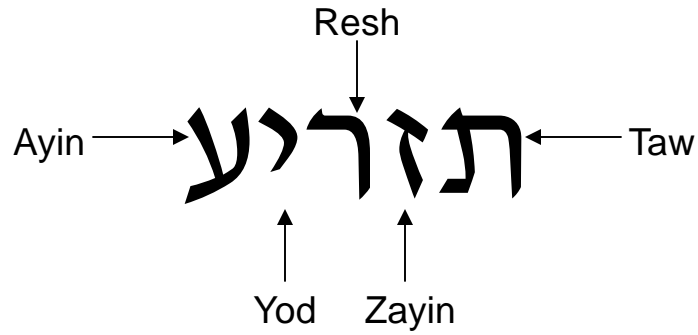

YHWH also told Moshe about a disease called "tzara'at." (It is usually translated as leprosy, but no one really knows what it was.) If someone had a white spot that was deeper than the skin around it, they were to go to one of the kohenim (priests), and if the Kohen determined that it was tzara'at, he would quarantine the person for seven days. After seven days, if it was gone, he would wash himself and be clean, but if it was not gone, he would be quarantined for another seven days. If it disappeared after that, he would wash himself and be clean. Linen, wool, and leather objects could also get tzara'at.
